

David Gledhill

David has a 40 year career in Logistics, Ports, Warehousing and Freezones including holding the position of Chief Executive at Hutchinsons Ports UK, who own the Port of Felixstowe and Harwich.

As a result of this David has a very good understanding of Port Management, operations and the legislative framework in which ports operate.

He has overseen large port infrastructure projects in three continents including environmental mitigation, seal wall construction and flood defences.

In his position as Chief Executive of Salalah Port and Freezone in Oman, he was responsible for a very successful tourist centre and cruise terminal, crowing the business by more than 300%.
